

One week to go! Help us reach our goal of £2000

We're on our way to filling our children's therapy rooms, like this one, with new toys and creative materials to help children recover from their experiences of domestic abuse.

We've now raised £745 for our #BeAChildAgain campaign, that's just over a third of our goal of £2000 with one week to go. Please help us reach our goal of £2000 in the next 7 days!

At DVIP, we know that each child we see is unique and we believe in their ability to solve his or her problems.

Our child-centred creative play therapy is tailored to each child's own individual needs, following Axline's 8 principles of non-directive play therapy. These principals emphasise the importance of giving children the freedom to express themselves completely, and the opportunity to take the lead in their therapy sessions.

That's why it's so important that the children we work with have access to a variety of diverse and inclusive toys, to give them a choice in how they tell their stories.

Support our campaign to provide new toys and creative materials to help these children recover from the trauma of domestic violence. All we need is £1250 to buy new diverse lego sets, inclusive puppets, musical instruments and art materials for our therapy rooms across London.

Please donate here and share what your favourite childhood toy was using the hashtag #beachildagain on twitter.

#beachildagain